UNITED STATES ABANDONS HOPE OF JAPAN PACT

Despairs of Reaching Any Agreement In Near Future
With Japanese

DEADLOCK IS REACHED

Japanese Unwilling To Quit
The Axis Alliance,
They Say

By Kingsbury Smith
(I. N. S. Staff Correspondent)

WASHINGTON, Oct. 2—The United States Government, it was learned on high authority today, has virtually abandoned hope of reaching a general understanding with Japan in the near future.

Unless unforeseen developments occur, the expiratory talks with the Nippon Empire are expected to peter out quietly.

The deadlock that has been reached in the discussions is due to the unwillingness of either the United States or Japan to depart from the fundamental principles of their current foreign policies.

Japan is unwilling to quit the Axis alliance, abandon its policy of expansion in Asia; withdraw from China; or promise to refrain from attacking Soviet Russia.

The United States is unwilling to concede any agreement with Japan at the expense of China; relax the economic blockade against the Nippon Empire as long as it remains an active member of the Axis alliance; or condone any Japanese attack on Soviet Russia.

The American Government is willing to extend large-scale economic and financial assistance to the Nippon Empire if it lets its alliance with the Axis become a deadletter and abandons its policy of aggressive expansion in the Far East, but the militaristic elements in Japan appear to have blocked any move which the more liberal-minded Japanese leaders might be willing to make in this direction.

Although a virtual stalemate has been reached on fundamental issues, both sides are reluctant to announce officially that the exploratory talks have failed.

The American Government does not wish to do so because it wants to leave the way open for Japan to change its mind at any time.

Tokyo, on the other hand, is believed to be desirous of keeping the talks going in order to stall for time pending more decisive developments in the Russo-German conflict.

While American officials naturally are disappointed that the talks have not been successful, they do not feel that they have been entirely in vain.

On the contrary, it is felt the talks served an invaluable purpose. They are seen as having checked, temporarily, at least, the swift pace at which relations between the United States and Japan were deteriorating in August, and as having averted a showdown between the two countries over the shipment of American supplies to Soviet Russia via Vladivostok.

Meanwhile, the first attack on Japan by a Cabinet member since the exploratory talks began was made yesterday by Secretary of the Navy Knox. In an Indianapolis speech he said that the U. S. and Britain must police the world after adequate steps are taken "to bring defeat to the legions of Hitler and his satellites in Italy and Japan."

Unidentified Plane Crashes in New Hampshire

STRATHAM, N. H., Oct. 2—(INS)—An unidentified bomber-type airplane crashed near the Stratham-Greenland boundary line, approximately five miles north of here, today.

Only meagre details were available. Naval officials from the nearby Portsmouth Navy Yard took charge and declined to identify the plane, except to say that it was not a Navy ship.

They would not identify it as an Army bomber and declined to say if it was an American-built plane en route to a Canadian airport for transfer to Britain.

The Navy officials said none of the crew was killed or seriously injured.

BRITISH SECRETS HOUSED IN VILLAGE

Small Building Conceals Vital
Secrets of the Armed Forces

By Lowell Bennett
(I. N. S. Staff Correspondent)

LONDON, Oct. 2—Some of the greatest secrets of the British armed forces are locked in a red-bricked building in a small English country town. The building is used as the headquarters of a training group of the R. A. F. Army Co-operating Command, and it is here that the organization and planning is prepared and controlled for training officers and men to develop new or improved methods of warfare.

About many of these methods no disclosures may be made since so much of their effectiveness will depend upon their unsuspected use.

The units of the group are to be found in all parts of Great Britain—on isolated strips of the coast, and at stations far inland. One of the outposts is so remote that when it is snowbound, roads become blocked and the only means of obtaining food was for supplies to be dropped by aerial transport.

All of these units are playing a useful part in the Air Force and Army co-operation, but one of the most important establishments for which the group is responsible is the training center of the British parachute troops.

Here the R. A. F. develops the parachute equipment, instructs the troops in the use of parachutes and the art of dropping, and teaches them air technique.

To the army falls the duty of selecting the parachutists—every one a volunteer—providing their weapons, and giving them tactical training for ground fighting.

Nowhere in Britain is there a better example of close co-operation between the Air Force and the Army than at this station of the special Air Service Troops.

Entirely different work is done at another station at which new and highly successful methods of artillery observation have been tried out by R. A. F. pilots who "spot" for the gunners from the air and, by an ingenious wireless system, direct the fire of batteries on to the enemy objective.

Effective tests are also being carried out in the use of air observation artillery officers, and at one unit, experiments are being undertaken with radio-location devices.

Elsewhere is a center for the development by special army formations of new and more deadly anti-aircraft fire—a center where the R. A. F. supply targets are the most numerous for they also provide practice for men training with the artillery not only with target towing flights, but with the famous British (automatically-operated) "Queen Bees."

These co-operation units are occupied too, with ways of destroying dive-bombers and exercises are now taking place, combined with lessons learned from the experiences of the battles of France and Britain, in Greece, Crete, and the Middle East, to make the lot of the enemy dive-bomber as unpleasant as possible.

The training of the British anti-aircraft gunners equips them with the latest devices and information concerning new aerial strategy. Nearly all of this training is carried on by these units.

At a school of army co-operation training, intelligence officers learn how to become air liaison officers. They form the link between an Army Cooperation Squadron and Army headquarters and their task is to "brief" pilots for aerial missions required by the army.

The reconnaissance over, they report back to the army on the information the pilot has gathered. Instructors at the school are officers fully acquainted with the specialized role of the Army Cooperation Command, and they manage to do an unspectacular job uncommonly well.

TREES AID CAMOUFLAGE

PONCE, Puerto Rico—(INS)—Uncle Sam's engineers engaged in converting Puerto Rico into the key military base in the Caribbean are getting a break from Nature. Puerto Rico's main highways are lined with flamboyant trees which form perfect arches over the highways, making them invisible from the air. Thus camouflage is unnecessary.

Declare State of Emergency For Bohemia-Moravia

Prague (via Berlin), Oct. 2—A rigid state of emergency, tantamount to martial law, was clamped down on the entire protectorate of Bohemia-Moravia by German authorities today and still more executions were announced.

At the same time officials declared Premier General Alois Elias, who was sentenced to death yesterday, has not yet been executed.

They said he probably will appeal for clemency, and that such an appeal may be permitted on the basis of his confession of guilt. He was accused of high treason.

Today's announcement stated that three additional protectorate districts had been placed under a state of emergency. This extended virtual martial rule to the entire area, since previously seven of the protectorate ten districts had been placed under similar regulations.

URGE REGISTRATION IN ADULT SCHOOL CLASSES

Early Listing Will Assure The Holding of Many of The Planned Courses

REGISTER AT ONCE

Tomorrow night, final registration for the Bristol Adult School will be held. Residents of the lower section of Bristol may register at 209 Radcliffe street, opposite the Bristol Trust Company, between 7 and 9:30 p. m. Residents of the upper section may register in the high school cafeteria at the same time.

Thomas A. Coles, secretary of the Adult School, said: "Many people who intend to attend the classes have not yet registered. You are making a grave mistake by waiting. Let me show you why. On Saturday the trustees must eliminate those classes which do not have enough persons enrolled to reasonably cover the cost of the instruction. Suppose on Saturday, that the course, interior decorating, has 15 people registered. This means an income of $30 for this course. However, the cost of instruction for this class is $50. The committee cannot engage this instructor and take a chance of securing 10 more students as the school continues. This course then must be eliminated from the curriculum, and those 15 people who have enrolled must change their course or have their money refunded. Suppose

Mumbauer Ayrshires Are 2nd Highest Producers

The distinction of ranking second highest in the U. S. during the month of August among all Ayrshire herds enrolled in the herd test goes to the six head owned by Alvin S. Mumbauer of Quakertown. With all animals immature, the group averaged 1155 lbs. milk, 43.6 lbs. fat on a twice-a-day milking schedule.

Mr. Mumbauer's farther-breeder herd was exceeded only by a unit that is owned by a state college and was milked three times daily. Topping the Mumbauer herd was the three-year-old heifer, Rushing Spring B. Addie with 1460 lbs. milk, 53 lbs. fat during the month; while second honors were taken by Rushing Spring Rosebud with 1401 lbs. milk, 46 lbs. fat.

Got Wrong Groceries

(By "The Stroller")
You can imagine the red face a certain resident of Edgely exhibited last night as he was about to get on a P. R. R. train with two big boxes of groceries.

The young man in question had stopped at a store here in Bristol and picked up off the floor two boxes which he thought contained an order his wife had purchased. He brought them to the Bristol station and was about to get on the train when the manager of the store hailed him.

There was quite a time sorting out the articles which belonged to the respective orders, but finally it was settled and the store manager delivered the order where it was intended to go and the Edgely man got on the train.

You can imagine what that young man would have been told when he got home with a lot of things which his wife hadn't purchased.

4 SCHOOLS CLOSED AT MORRISVILLE, DUE TO POLIO CASE

Disease

VICTIM IS DORIS NOLAN

Three Schools Will Be Reopened On Monday Morn-

MORRISVILLE, Oct. 2—A case of infantile paralysis has developed here and the four public schools have been ordered closed. The schools were ordered closed yesterday when Dr. Theodore R. Cohen, a physician, said the victim was Doris Nolan, six years old, a pupil in the first grade at the Manor Park School.

The child's condition was described by Dr. Cohen as not serious. She is being confined to her home at 45 Moreau street for treatment.

Doris was under observation at her home for several days, but her case was not diagnosed as infantile paralysis until yesterday morning. A short time later Dr. James M. Klenk, school physician, ordered all the borough's schools closed.

E. L. Crum, principal of Morrisville High School, said the Manor Park School will be closed until Monday, October 13, while the remaining institutions—William E. Case and Capitol View grade schools and the high school—will reopen on Monday. There are approximately 1,200 pupils in the four schools.

Possibility exists, as a result of the Nolan case, that the gridiron contest between Morrisville and Langhorne High Schools, scheduled for tomorrow night, may be cancelled.

The victim is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Nolan.

AFTER THE WAR

A greater technological advance in the design of machinery now deemed necessary to civilized living may be expected after this war ends than occurred following the war of twenty-five years ago. Automobiles may be changed so radically in appearance and in mechanical specifications five years from now that today's latest creation will, by comparison, resemble a relic of a past age.

Similar advances may be expected in radios, in electric refrigerators, in heating plants and, in fact, in every product of post-war industry. Mechanical genius has not been stopped by the needs of war to which a major part of industry is now devoted—it has merely been given a holiday which it is utilizing to prepare for the big job it will face when the war ends.

There was unparalleled improvement in what may be termed the mechanics of living following the last war. A relentless year-by-year improvement in motor cars soon made the wartime vehicles as obsolete as the dodo. The electric refrigerator, the radio, oil burner and stoker, even the electric light came into their own in the years immediately following the war. Almost each new house that was built had incorporated in it improvements of design and of fixtures.

But that was a pioneer age, relatively, and industry's methods were incomparably crude compared to those of this day. What industry will be able to do to advance civilization following the end of the present war will far surpass former achievements.

The present hiatus in improvements to consumer goods and restrictions on their manufacture will help to build up a latent market that will be a spur to mechanical genius to do its utmost. Also, the growing conviction that this may not be the opportune time to replace automobiles or other aids to modern living unless they are worn out will help to dam up demand which will be unloosed like a flood when the signal is given for factories to switch to normal civilian production. Eagerness of the manufacturers to hook large segments of this business will provide the incentive for producing a greatly improved product.

Civilization comes high. In Julius Caesar's time it cost 70 cents to kill a soldier while today the cost is estimated at $50,000.

SUNDAY DINNER Suggestions

With the first hint of fall in the air in cooler nights and early mornings, the family's appetites undoubtedly will respond to more robust menus and to foods which throughout the summer may have been too rich for hot weather fare.

However, do not forget that many of the best liked of the fruits and vegetables will shortly disappear from market for many months and one should take advantage of them now while they are cheap and plentiful. Among the low priced and tempting fruits and vegetables in market this week are: Greening apples, seedless grapes, honeydews, oranges, plums, peaches, pears, prunes, green beans, lima beans, cabbage, carrots, celery, corn lettuce, white onions, peppers, potatoes, squash and tomatoes.

Meat prices remain little changed from last week with a slight advance here and there. Beefsteak, chuck steaks and pot roasts and lamb chops and legs are the best buys. Poultry will also prove helpful in keeping the budget down, fowls, broilers and fryers being quite attractively priced.

Marion Rouse Budd, director of the A & P Kitchen, has prepared the following menus as suggestions for Sunday dinners:

Low Cost Dinner
Stewed Chicken with Dumplings
Mashed Potatoes
Green Beans
Bread and Butter
Cold Cucumber with Fresh Peaches
Hot or Iced Tea

Medium Cost Dinner
Swiss Steak
Stuffed Potatoes
Creamed Carrots
Bread and Butter
Plum Pancakes with Hard Sauce
Hot or Iced Coffee

Very Special Dinner
Orange and Maraschino Cup
Salted Nuts
Porterhouse Steak
French Fried Potatoes
Casserole Squash

SENATE STENOGRAPHER by MAXWELL THAYER

SYNOPSIS

Senator Jeffrey Murray, secretly discussing under-cover plans to put over a monopoly bill in the Legislature, is overheard by Gale Holoway, pretty small-town girl, looking for a position. Her accidental eavesdropping brings her a $250 monthly job as Murray's secretary. Visiting Nan Parkson, political hostess, Gale is bumped into a swimming pool by Marie Gibbins, deprived of her job by Gale. Joe Nash, Governor McKurt's handsome secretary, rescues her. Later, Murray is furious when he finds Gale going through his secret files, but his ire vanishes and he insists she accept an apartment, adjoining his, rent free, as he sometimes works at night and wants her within call. Playing bridge at the Parkson home, Gale wins $40 as partner to Cedric Colburn, powerful lobbyist who has much to gain if Murray's bill is passed. Opposing them are the two who were discussing the bill with Murray, Assemblyman Tom Olmstead and Jim Drake, corporation representative. In the privacy of Nan's boudoir, when Gale tells her hostess she likes to play bridge with Colburn, Nan retorts: "I'm afraid there isn't much you could do about it if you didn't. He's a stubborn man. Perhaps that's why he's gone so far." Returning to the living room, Gale overhears Colburn marveling over her and saying: "... a smart girl like this one could turn the trick..." Next night, Gale dines with Senator Murray. Suddenly, an intoxicated Colburn appears and asks her to dance. "Why certainly," says Murray, as though it were a special privilege he alone could bestow.

CHAPTER NINE

To Gale, it was a new Colburn, a man so different from the silent one she had known before, that if she had closed her eyes she wouldn't have recognized him.

He was talkative of all things. He told her how he admired her beauty, her card playing, her smartness and then he went farther than he would have gone had he been sober. Of this she was certain.

Colburn, the lobbyist, told her that she could go a long way—with him, that the monopoly bill was his baby and that he would win. He always won. He, Colburn, was the greatest man in the Legislature, even though he was not "in" it.

He said more, too, about his background, how he had risen from a nothing to a somebody, but that he was still despised by even the men he made and that, some day, he would show them.

Gale tried to quiet him, but the music played on and Colburn stumbled along with it by step and by word.

Finally he described Senator Murray as a "numbskull" going to become a wealthy man because he, Colburn, had arranged it. He said the monopoly bill would make Murray the attorney in charge of one of the world's largest companies, with an enormous annual retainer.

And then the music ended and he took her back to her table, thanked her, hiccupped and went away.

Murray could think of nothing to say, under the circumstances, and when the music started again, he asked Gale to dance.

She accepted. But she was sick at heart—sick that she had ever come in contact with such people. She followed Murray's steps automatically and then—suddenly—she left a bewildered senator standing in the midst of the dance floor as she fled toward the cool, clean night air.

Gale's mind was in too much of a turmoil to heed the fact that she was walking unescorted along the sidewalks in a most incongruous manner—her wide-brimmed straw flying at a crazy angle. She seemed to be dashing through a nightmare.

As she became aware of it, she realized suddenly that she was shivering, that she was chilled through. She hailed a passing cab and directed the driver to her apartment.

Hot coffee was what she wanted most. She tossed a dressing cap over her shoulders and went into her kitchen to brew the coffee while her mind brewed on that one question: "What shall I do?"

The buzzer sounded and in a minute, Senator Murray, carrying her wrap, gloves and purse, stood before her door.

"Oh," she said, "thank you!" And took the things from him.

"Why run out on me?" There was part of it, no matter how small my part might be. I remembered hearing the first day I came to your office—

"Then you did hear?" Murray interrupted.

"Yes, I heard, but it didn't mean anything to me then. I didn't realize that you were violating your oath of office for money."

There was a silence while he rubbed his palms together and looked at the floor.

"It is a difficult thing to explain to you," Jeff rose to his feet and paced the floor. "Please understand that my bill does not hurt any of my constituents, or I wouldn't have introduced it. I couldn't afford to."

"Perhaps this will help you under-no anger in his voice as she might have expected; only a question.

"I couldn't stand it," she answered simply, still not conscious that she was keeping him standing in the hall.

"May I come in?" he asked.

"Certainly," she said, and stood aside for him to enter.

He tossed his hat and coat upon the chesterfield and seated himself in an upholstered chair.

"Tell me about it," he asked.

"There isn't much to tell. Perhaps I was silly, but, Colburn told me that you had introduced the monopoly bill because it would get you a position as an attorney for one of the largest companies in the world."

She looked at him for verification and he nodded his head.

"My idea," she continued, "had always been that legislators were elected to represent the people in their districts and not simply to feather their own nests. Perhaps I had the wrong idea." She waited for him to answer.

"Go on," was all he said.

"Well, somehow or other, I suddenly became sorry that I was any stand: The pay of senators and of assemblymen is small—too small in itself to attract men who are capable of legislating. So practically every man-jack of them has what the public might term a racket.

"You take Senator Daws. He's an attorney, too, and he handles practically all of the agricultural legislation, irrigation district stuff, and he's counsel for some of the largest agricultural firms and for several irrigation districts."

"That is just one case in many in the Senate. But the Assembly is no exception. Take Tommy Olmstead. He's in the insurance business, true, and so he handles the insurance legislation and, incidentally, gets a nice cut out of the state's business."

"Then there's Assemblyman Pickles. He's a teacher and he handles school legislation. Oh, you can't see anything wrong in that? Well, perhaps there isn't, but he was just a teacher when he came here and now he's principal of a school. The school lobby saw to that."

"So, in one way or another, we all have our axes to grind if we are smart enough to be legislators. Do you see?"

Gale saw all right. She told him so in language that burned. She even threatened to leave the apartment that night, move back to the hotel and to quit her job.

RECIPES: Those Which Interest Women

Corn-On-Cob Season Calls For Pot-Roast

Boned Cut Is Economical; Can Be Carved Easily

It's the season for corn on the cob, and other autumn vegetables are also plentiful and tempting. To bring out their full value, what better main dish can you choose than beef pot-roast? A boned and rolled pot-roast is preferred by some homemakers because it is so easy to carve. It makes a very fine appearing dish, brown and crisp outside, tender and juicy within.

Beef pot-roasts are cut from the a favorite. The beef rump makes a chunk or shoulder section is always less-tender parts of the animal. The good pot-roast, either with or without the bones. A three-cornered boneless cut which makes a fine small pot-roast is the heel of the round.

The same method of cooking is used for any of these cuts. The meat is browned in hot lard, then a small amount of water or other liquid added, the pan is closely covered and the meat cooked slowly for a long time. It may be cooked on top of the range or in the oven, whichever is most convenient.

To give pot-roast a distinctive flavor, spices may be added to the liquid in which it is cooked. Here is a delicious way of preparing it, suggested by Inez S. Wilson, home economist.

Savory Pot-Roast

- 4 pounds beef rump or chuck
- Clove of garlic
- 3 teaspoons salt
- 1/4 teaspoon pepper
- 3 tablespoons lard
- 1 cup hot water
- 1/2 teaspoon Worcestershire sauce
- 1/4 cup chili sauce

Rub the meat thoroughly with a bruised clove of garlic. Add salt and pepper. Brown the pot-roast on all sides in hot lard melted in a heavy kettle with a tight-fitting cover. Add water, Worcestershire sauce and chili sauce. Cover and simmer gently until meat is tender, about three and a half hours. Turn the pot-roast occasionally. Add more water, if necessary, a little at a time. Make gravy by thickening the liquid with flour smoothed in water.

Serve it with peas and carrots, diced, and corn on the cob.

Platter Meals Are Big Time-Savers

When active days of early fall approach, it's time to use the broiler for easy, kitchen effects.

Smartly in step with the light touch of a new season are broiler meals. They fall right in with the new colors and with early fall plans. And they bring the same feeling of relief from summer heat for they're short on preparation and long on flavor.

Several foods are fine for broiling. For instance, on a fall-ish evening, serve a grilled bacon plate. Or a satisfying "platter meal" of pan-broiled tomatoes and bacon, little pork sausage, and cornmeal mush squares. Or when guests are coming for lunch, turn out a pan-fried liver sausage and tomato platter to make everyone glad they came.

Besides potatoes, both sweet and Irish, other foods fine for broiling are tomatoes both green and ripe, onions, mushrooms, canned asparagus, par-poiled carrots, apple slices, oranges, grapefruit, bananas, peaches, pears, and apricots.

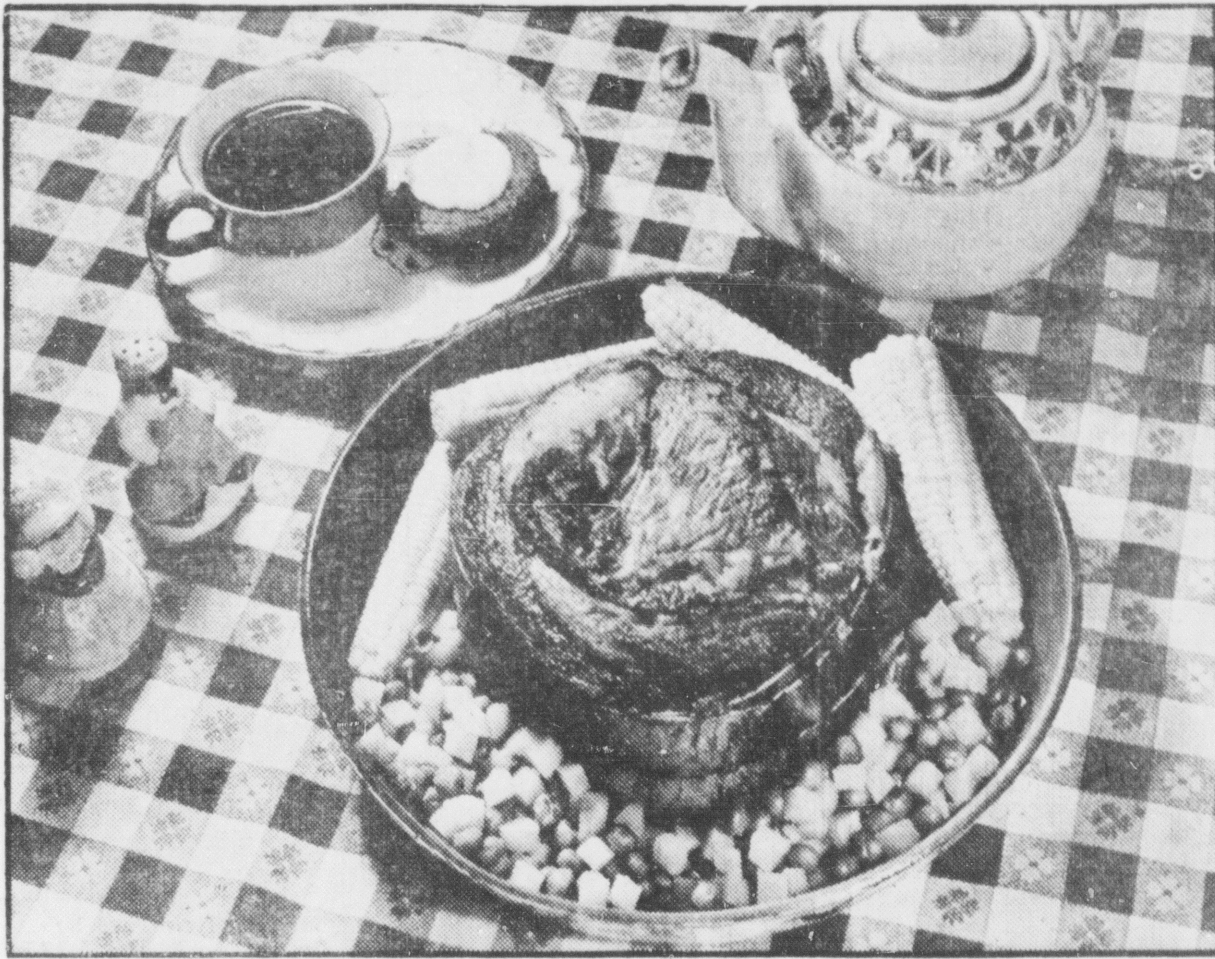

Many meats that can be broiled satisfactorily, are lamb steaks and chops, lamb patties, frankfurters, beef patties, bacon, sliced ham, sweetbreads, lamb or pork kidneys.

If you'd broil the whole meal, you'd save on time and dishwashing. Some appealing combinations for broiled meats are as follows:

1. Frankfurters split and stuffed with sauerkraut, broiled potato slices (parboiled), sliced tomatoes.
2. Beef patties and bacon, potato cakes, carrot slices (parboiled), and onion slices.
3. Ham slice, sweet potato slices brushed with butter, brussels sprouts.
4. Lamb patties, grapefruit slices, bunches of canned asparagus, par-boiled parsnips.
5. Lamb or pork kidneys wrapped with bacon, tomato slices, Spanish rice.
6. Sweetbreads, onion slices, peach halves.
7. Broiled tomatoes, broiled mushrooms, broiled ham steak.
8. Canned asparagus bunches, tomato quarters, broiled bananas, broiled lamb shoulder steaks.
9. Broiled pineapple, broiled onions on hamburgers, bundles of canned green beans.
10. Grilled potato sticks, onion slices, parboiled carrot strips, grilled calves' liver.
11. Parboiled green pepper cases, filled with cheese and rice, grilled tomatoes, Canadian bacon.

If you have a house to rent, advertise it in The Courier.

TRY POT ROAST WITH CORN-ON-COB

THRIFT PRACTICED AS NOTE IS MADE OF FOOD PRICE RISE

By Miss Edna Stephany
(Home Economics Representative)

"Waste not—want not!" is a maxim thrifty homemakers have always practiced. And with every rise in food prices the army of thrifty homemakers gets more recruits.

Today, stopping unnecessary food wastes at home has become much more than a matter of family thrift. It is a basic step in the nation-wide movement to conserve all of this country's food resources.

Groundwork for much waste is laid in unplanned shopping. Some homemakers can buy far ahead because they can make plans far ahead. Some can't. It depends on how regularly every member of the family eats at home. Some groceries can be bought long ahead of time. Some can't. It depends upon how perishable they are and the storage arrangements in the home.

Learning to know marks of quality eliminates much shopping waste. Government grades can help the buyer. So can other information on labels of packaged products.

Wise shoppers also see that they get their money's worth in quantity. This, too, can be learned from reading labels. Thrifty homemakers also make sure that the butcher puts in all the fat trimmings with her cut of meat. These she uses in her cooking.

Improper storage is another food thief. Leftover fats and drippings are good food and can be used again, but they must be stored as carefully as other fats—in a dry, cold, dark place. Left on the stove to grow rancid, they'll not only be a waste in themselves, but they will spoil the flavor of other foods in which they are used.

Many very obvious food wastes occur when food is being prepared for cooking. There can be a lot of waste in potatoes peeled too thick, in outside leaves of lettuce or cabbage thrown away as a matter of habit—in lemons or oranges only partially squeezed—in batter or dough not scraped thoroughly out of the mixing bowl.

There can be waste, too, in products that are carelessly prepared and because of that turn out to be failures. Careless measuring, for instance, can often make the difference between a successful cake and one that is thrown away or only half eaten.

Poor cooking is responsible for food the family wastes by leaving portions uneaten on the plate. Tasteless, monotonous meals and servings that are too large cannot keep a family interested. And no cook should pat herself on the back for saving leftovers, if she simply warms them up and has to throw them out later on. Good cooks use leftovers so they lose their identity in an entirely new dish.

Good cooks never throw away a bit of meat drippings, but use them to fry potatoes or flavor the string beans.

Meat that is improperly cooked at too high a temperature shrinks in the process much more than necessary. This means fewer servings per pound.

Not visible to the naked eye, but important losses nevertheless are the vitamin values and minerals lost in cooking foods. To prevent this loss follow these rules.

Don't stir air into foods while cooking. Don't put them through a sieve while still hot. Don't use soda in cooking green vegetables. In boiling foods, raise the temperature to the boiling point as rapidly as possible. Use as little water as possible. Don't use long cooking processes such as stewing when shorter methods are feasible. Don't throw away the water in which vegetables have been cooked. Use it in making gravies, sauces, and soups. Prepare chopped fruit and vegetable salads just before serving. Start cooking frozen fruits and vegetables while they are still frozen. Serve raw frozen fruits immediately after thawing. After food is cooked, serve it at once.

FASHION PARADE

By Orry-Kelly

(Famous Hollywood Stylist Writing For International News Service)

HOLLYWOOD—(INS)—Like that famous Arab who folded up his tent and stole silently away, styles may suddenly drop out of the picture leaving the girl who buys too soon or the girl who is not alert holding a conceit as dated as yesterday's headlines. But sometimes there's a bright right about face.

What became a passing fancy last year, decides to turn up again this year as a fashion staunch and true.

This is the history of the bolero. The now serene and happy adjunct to the feminine wardrobe had its ups and downs for years.

Such, too, is the sad history of "the bustle."

Remember two years ago, when the oft-predicted bustle mode finally arrived. A few women, daring to repeat a style that sophisticated moderns chuckled over when they viewed grandma's capacious derriere in the dust-bound album on the parlor table, wore our streamlined bustle dresses. But here were oh too few, and the bustle died a quick and violent death. Only to be resurrected two years later. Yes, sir, fall 1941!

So, if you've tucked away a bustle dress, seemingly doomed to oblivion, get it out! It will probably be in the height of fashion.

This year's bustle frock takes devious and sundry routes to achieve "that certain back interest." It may appear in bustle ruffles, bustle tiers, bustle bows, bustle drapes.

As Arthur Falkenstein, interpreted the bustle in a dress Bette Davis wears in "The Man Who Came To Dinner" it appears in very generous drapes and pugs. The material is a soft and clinging black silk jersey with low slung bodice that is longer in front than in back, long tight sleeves, rounded shoulders and modest neckline. Bette wears a single strand of Oriental pearls from her own jewel box.

HAIR PROBLEMS by IDA

DO YOU KNOW THAT HAIR GETS SUNBURNED TOO?

The extreme heat and scorching rays of the Sun, and salt water, have played havoc with those who have been to the seashore during the past few months.

Not many people realize what the Sun does to the hair. It actually robs all the vital oils and makes the hair harsh, coarse and brittle. It also loses its sheen, from the lack of natural oil.

It is very important that scalp treatments be taken before your next permanent . . . treatments that will actually restore the oils which the Sun and salt water have robbed. It would be murder to your hair if a permanent was given on top of SUNBURNED HAIR.

Our Treatments consist of cleansing, lubricating and stimulating, giving your hair loveliness you never dreamed possible.

"Furthermore, although it primarily and namely is the duty of the Army to give the training that will make men efficient soldiers, vocational training is not lacking."

Tokyo, Oct. 2—Japanese officialdom today admitted withdrawal of Nipponese forces in vital Hunan Province of China, but labelled this part of a strategic plan for annihilation of the opposing Chinese armies.

Chinese officials characterized the Japanese withdrawal as a ruse and a debacle, and said the Japanese suffered tremendous losses.

The official Japanese agency Domei meanwhile reported from the Hunan front that more than 120,000 Chinese troops had been trapped in the New Yellow River region around Chenghsien.

Japan To Play Part, Halting Aid To Russia

Berlin, Oct. 2—Japan will play her part when the time comes in stopping British and American aid to Russia, a Wilhelmstrasse spokesman said today. "The only practical delivery route is by way of Vladivostok, which is ice-locked in the winter," the spokesman said. "Japan will have her word to say when the time comes."

The observation was made during a discussion of the three-power conference in Moscow, which was ridiculed. Britain has openly confessed, he said, that she cannot help Russia.

Nurse Bound To Bed By A Negro

Wilmington, Del., Oct. 2—Miss Mary Jenkins, 29-year-old nurse, was bound to her bed by her stockings and a bandana today by a Negro robber who then attempted to assault her.

Miss Jenkins told police she was awakened by a noise in her bedroom, and turned on the light to see the intruder. "Put out that light or I'll kill

19 Escape Injury As Plane Skids Off Runway

Pittsburgh, Oct. 2—Nineteen passengers escaped injury today when a Birmingham-bound plane of Pennsylvania-Central Airlines skidded off the edge of a wet runway and slid down an embankment at Morgantown, W. Va. Airport, the airline announced.

A PCA spokesman said the plane, which left Pittsburgh at 8:15 a. m., was making a landing in the rain at Morgantown Airport when it slid off the runway.

Stalin Receives Roosevelt-Churchill Messages

Moscow, Oct. 2—Personal messages from President Roosevelt and Prime Minister Churchill were handed to Premier Stalin today as the three-power conference on aid to Russia ended amid reports of intensive activity all along the Russo-German battle-front.

W. Averell Harriman, chief of the American delegation, presented Mr. Roosevelt's letter, while Lord Beaverbrook handed over the communication from Churchill. There was no clue as to their nature.

A YEAR

Nothing makes a selective service man in camp happier than a letter from home or a home-town newspaper in the daily mail, army officials said recently after an extensive survey.

Next in order, the selective service youth likes sweets such as candy, cookies and chocolates—and chewing gum!

Officers say that on the march the gum helps keep the boys from drinking too much water and from dipping into their lunch ration.

Other offerings which bring a smile of pleasure to the enrollee include a general repertoire of utilities among which are books of stamps, flashlights, a towel now and then, toilet articles, and reading materials.

Officers say that if relatives want to be sure their addressee gets what's mailed to him, they should address the letter or package in this way: Name first, his company or battery second, his regiment third, and, lastly the name of the post office.

Two Art Exhibitions Are Being Held At New Hope

October is Art Month in New Hope. Until November 2nd, two fine local art exhibitions will run simultaneously within a mile or two of each other.

The Gallery of the New Hope Art Associates, on the grounds of the Bucks County Playhouse, opened its October exhibit on Tuesday, featuring the work of the well known illustrator, Lyle Justis, as artist of the month. Mr. Justis, one of the most prolific artists in America, has developed a technique peculiarly his own. Perhaps his best known works are his delightful pen and ink drawings, which show a flexibility rarely seen in this medium. He has adapted his technique to many and varied requirements, and will exhibit pictures in each style, including illustrations from several books.

In addition to the special collection of work by Mr. Justis, the membership of the New Hope Art Associates will be represented by some of the finest canvases yet to be hung in the Gallery. The exhibit is being built around a New Hope theme with local landscapes striking the predominant note in the show. The Gallery is open every day in the week, except Monday, 2 to 5:30 p. m.

Phillips Mill will open its Fall Art Exhibition on October 4th, and will run through November 2nd. The Spring and Fall exhibits at the Mill have become traditional in New Hope for they were started many years ago by a few artists who comprised the nucleus of what is now known as the New Hope Art Colony. The mill show, which takes place semi-annually, is a review of the year's work by local artists and differs from the New Hope Gallery exhibitions in that all paintings exhibited at the mill are selected by a jury, whereas the New Hope Art Associates is owned and operated cooperatively by its membership, each member making his selection for the monthly shows which continue throughout the year. A great many painters are represented in both exhibitions.

The 1941 jury of the Phillips Mill Show is headed by Peter Cook, and includes four other artists: Paul Froelich, John F. Folinsbee, Elizabeth Freedley and Charles Ward.

The mill exhibit will include work by men whose names have become noteworthy in the world of art. Edward W. Redfield, Daniel Garber, John F. Folinsbee, Harry Leith-Ross, Leon Karp, Charles Ward, M. Elizabeth Price, Walter E. Baum, Robert Hogue, Jessie Drew-Bear, R. A. D. Miller, and Robert B. Moyer are only a few of the exhibitors now widely known to the public.

Young artists and new talent share the walls with painters of established reputations, and it is the possibility of a new discovery or two each year (and there have been many), that lends an element of vitality and excitement to every mill show.

Today's Quiet Moment

(By the Rev. James R. Galley)

Pastor, Bristol Presbyterian Church

We are grateful unto Thee, O God, that Thou dost not withhold Thyself from any eager, hungry, obedient heart. We know that Thou art willing to give Thyself unto us. Teach us how to open our nature unto Thee. Help us to be obedient to Thy will, joyous in our allegiance, cooperative in all Thy plans. Disturb us when we go astray; discipline us when we are willful; hearten us when we are discouraged; strengthen us when we are perplexed, that we might the better live and glorify Thee. ON THE SCREENS

GRAND THEATRE

Richard Carlson, who heads the supporting cast in Universal's newest Abbott and Costello starrer, "Hold That Ghost," which opens today at the Grand Theatre, is happy in Hollywood—and for a most unusual reason. He has finally lost the tag of "genius" which haunted him throughout his school and university days.

When Carlson was a freshman in high school he wrote a play which was presented in Minneapolis. Newspaper critics immediately hailed him as a "young genius."

BRISTOL THEATRE

Johnny Downs is appearing in "Redhead" at the Bristol.

"Thanks for Everything," featuring Adolphe Menjou and Tony Martin, flashes on the screen of the Bristol Theatre as part of the double feature.

A splendid new romance, enhanced by swiny and singy tunes, daring and delightful new dance routines and comedy both sophisticated and zany, "Time Out For Rhythm," opened yesterday to provide Ritz Theatre audiences with everything desirable in entertainment.

"The Marines Are Here," starring June Travis, is also at the Ritz.

Interesting changes have been made in fabrics for curtains. Rayons now are used for many of them, but cotton still is prominent. Materials, such as marquisette, voile, net, and dotted swiss, are used for the tailored types.

Because various fabrics react in different ways to cleaning, it is wise to know what materials are used in the curtains. Glass curtains need frequent washing for open windows in summer mean that wind, dust, rain, and sun soil them in a short time. In winter, dust and smoke from winter fuels soon make them look gray and dirty. Often washing, if carefully done, will prolong the life of the curtain.

Some materials have a permanent finish that does not require starching and ironing. Others are treated so as to repel water, a desirable factor for casement window curtains.

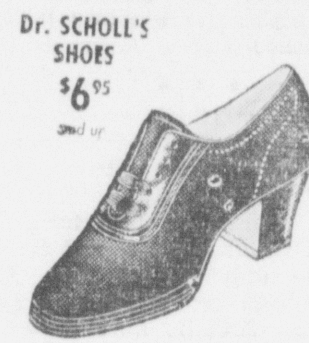

To launder curtains remove any metal weights or hooks. Soak in soapy water 20 minutes, two or three hours or even overnight. Wash in soapsuds until clean and rinse thoroughly. You can pat sheer curtains to remove water instead of twisting them. Curtains that are likely to be streaked or faded should be given a tinting rinse.

A curtain stretcher is the most satisfactory way to dry curtains. If no stretcher is available, they may be stretched and pinned securely to a clean heavy rug. If you hang curtains on a line, be sure they are hung straight and not in a strong wind.

BENSALEM GIRLS WIN FIRST GAME OF PRESENT SEASON

Second-Half Goal by Eleanor Hughes Gains The Victory
FINAL SCORE IS 2 TO 1
Mildred Vansant Made Nice Saves Twice During The Game

LANGHORNE, Oct. 2—A second half goal by Eleanor Hughes gave the Bensalem girls hockey team its first victory of the 1941 season yesterday afternoon as it tossed out the Langhorne girls, 2-1, in a hard-fought game.

Hughes' goal was well-earned as she dribbled almost the entire length of the field and they shot the pellet past the Langhorne goalie.

The first Bensalem score had come in the first half when Doris Ely received a pass from the center-halfback, Doris Gonzalez, and then proceeded to register the tally.

The Langhorne score was also manufactured in the first half of the tilt. This came after a bitter battle near the scoring posts. Twice the Bensalem goalie, Mildred Vansant, made nice saves but following another stick scrimmage, Helen Newbold, whacked the ball past her for a goal.

The forward line of the Owletts team played beyond expectations in their passing. This was supposed to have been Coach Smith's weak link in her line-up but yesterday's tilt proved differently.

LOCAL PITCHER IN TRYOUT WITH A'S AT SEASON'S CLOSE

Tullytown Boy Invited To Perform For Try Next Year

SPORTS IN SHORTS

Stray Bits of Sports Gossip Picked Up Here and There

By Jack Gill

Two years ago, a boy pitched great all in the twilight league. Last summer, owing to shift work, he was handicapped severely and practically surrendered the game for a campaign, but he was persuaded to show his stuff before Coaches Earl Brucker and Earl Mack down at Sibley Park one day. The result found "Pinky" Bachofer of Tullytown, creating an impression. He was invited to contact the club next year at the start of the season. Pinky, by the way, wore Sammy Chapman's much "too big" suit.

Bob Monti, of Bristol high school, won the state class B broad jump title at Penn State last year, ran quarter miles in the low fifties, and played a better than average game of basketball all last season for the Bunnies. This year, as a senior, the likeable boy is prohibited from participating in sports owing to an early scholastic period of difficulty. He's a pretty forlorn looking figure standing around the sidelines. With his ability he should be "in there" digging up the turf. We were thinking that he is ripe for prep school activity. He's young, a marked prospect and hasn't as yet attained his peak in performance.

In losing to Trenton high school, Saturday night, before 3,200 people at Dunn Field, Morrisville made but four first downs to Trenton's 19, and could gain but 27 yards rushing to the winner's 238. That, in short, is a decisive and convincing defeat. Villanova may shoot two teams, using two different styles of play, at Centre, Saturday night. Nineteen is now the high school P. I. A. A. age limit.

There will be increased action in independent ranks this fall. Although one can never take anything for granted, St. Ann's players figured upon opening their season Sunday. So, likewise, did the South Langhorne Aces. The Aces drill Tuesday and Thursday nights under an arclight and on Sunday afternoon. Bill Forbes will coach them this campaign.

We were talking to a local resident who saw the Nova-Louis fiasco at the to Grounds, Monday evening. According to him, the fans took the technical K. O. as ruled by veteran Arthur Donovan as a formal closing gesture. There was little bickering or booing. But he did state that Nova looked O. K. after a few moments rest.

Bobby Banton, the kid who looked so good against Bristol as a baseball and basketball player for Trenton Catholic, last year, has entered Notre Dame University. Bensalem was pointing for the Bristol game even before Boyertown invaded Cornwells Heights. And the Bunnies are usual starting time of 7.30. The worrying about big Paul Ruby's injury, "Saints" coach would like to see all Every local football team that the players present, as final instruc-tioned will be given for the opening action-crammed week-end wound up game Sunday with Glenside A. A., behind the well-known eight-ball, which will be played on the latter's field.

Bensalem were beaten. Wilbur VanLenten, of Edgely, and Bob Wallace, of Morrisville, are both considered outstanding end prospects by Penn State's veteran mentor, Bob Higgins.

ST. ANN'S TO PRACTICE

The St. Ann's football team will practice at 6.30 tonight instead of the usual starting time of 7.30. The "Saints" coach would like to see all the players present, as final instructions will be given for the opening action-crammed week-end wound up game Sunday with Glenside A. A., behind the well-known eight-ball, which will be played on the latter's field.
